

TRANSITIONAL HOUSING – VILLAGES

Our Transitional Housing – Villages provides rent-free, two- and three-bedroom apartments to wounded, ill, and injured warriors and their families as they leave the military. This program allows families to heal together, while bridging the gap between military pay ending and veteran benefits beginning, or when disability claims are finalized and disability payments begin.

With locations in Gaithersburg, Maryland; San Diego, California; and San Antonio, Texas, each participating family is provided with:

- Rent/utility-free, fully furnished apartment
- Case management and customized transition plans
- One-on-one financial counseling
- Assistance with medical referrals
- Employment coaching and educational guidance
- Support network

Families stay an average of 8-18 months and most make impressive financial progress during their stay, leaving the program debt-free, or nearly so, with an emergency savings plan in place.

Aspiring physician Tatyana Davis served 10 years in the Navy before transitioning to civilian life and continuing her education in the medical field.

Tatyana is grateful to Operation Homefront and its transitional housing programs for helping her family through the difficult transition from military to civilian life.

She and her husband, Loniel Hoskins, lived for eight months at Operation Homefront's Transitional Housing – Villages in San Diego, California, as she went through the medical board process.

Tatyana and Loniel's son, Sebastien, was born about a month after they moved in.

The program shielded the family from the rampant increases in food costs that coincided with her separation from the military, the birth of her son, and the infant formula crisis, she said.

"(Operation Homefront and its donors) provide solutions and help us improve the way we live life so we can do it on our own in the future. It gives us encouragement to keep doing better for ourselves."
